

Looking ahead to more track and field action

The World Athletics Championships Oregon22 may have been and gone, but there's still plenty of track and field action to come this year.

The World Athletics U20 Championships Cali 22 got under way in the Colombian capital this week, then in the weeks that follow there will be further top-class international action at the Commonwealth Games, European Championships and NACAC Championships.

And, of course, the Wanda Diamond League will continue until early September when Zurich hosts the series finale, while the Continental Tour carries on until October.

World Athletics headline news

Record number of countries win gold at World Athletics Championships Oregon22

The World Athletics Championships Oregon22 provided ideal conditions for the best track and field athletes in the world to shine on a global stage, with exhilarating and record-breaking performances by both individual athletes and national teams.

More than 1700 athletes from 180 teams competed in Oregon, watched by almost 150,000 ticketed spectators, and producing three world records.

In terms of performance, this will go down as the most universal edition in the history of the global event. The record for the number of countries winning gold medals at one championships has been broken, with 29 countries taking turns on the top step of the podium, compared with 26 in 2017.
